ENDURANCE FOR THE RACE

WRITTEN BY JERRY ASCHER

I am not a long distance runner. I once joined the cross-country team in high school purely because the coach needed people. When the season ended, any desire to run competitively ended with it. You won't catch me signing up for a marathon any time soon, that's for sure. I can't even imagine running the 26.2 miles that constitute the modern marathon. However, every year throughout the world, many people participate in these grueling events, and the number continues to grow. Unfortunately, in the end, many who participate in marathons are found to have cheated somewhere along the course, and in this technological age, many are caught and disqualified. Paul makes this statement to Timothy, "And also if anyone competes in athletics, he is not crowned unless he competes according to the rules." Many believers want to receive the promised rewards from the Lord at the end of life's race but those same believers lack the endurance to persevere each day in His service. They want to finish the race and receive the imperishable crown, but they aren't willing to follow Paul's instruction to "run in such a way that you may obtain it." Temptations to cut spiritual corners, to find the easy route, to consider God's commands burdensome, or to just give up following Christ altogether face the believer every day. For some, these temptations have no doubt increased in their intensity during this crisis.

The writer of Hebrews reminds each of God's children that success in the race is dependent on keeping our focus on Christ, "the author and finisher of our faith." So, let us run with endurance, and let us run according to the rules, so that one day, God can proclaim to every believer, "Well done, good and faithful servant!"
